Using the "add layer" tool in ArcGIS this tool will create and load a new layer from the map document. The Layer Manager in ArcGIS Pro allows you to easily add layers using files, raster, or vector maps. Simply create a new layer by right clicking the layer collection in the map document, and select "add layer". The first layer we add will be the basemap layer, but we can add additional layers using the Layer Manager. When a layer is added to a project in ArcGIS Pro, the layer is added to the correct layer in the project. The layer is added to the project as a new document. In ArcGIS Pro, layers are associated with a map document but are not part of the map. The layer is applied to the map with a red X icon. This layer is not used for geographic visualization. You can manage the layers associated with each map document. You can use layers to create content, such as labels or vector features. To create a new layer, select "add layer" from the layer collection in the ArcGIS Pro project. You can add a layer to the current active map document or to a new map document. Select the "add layer" tool. The tool will automatically connect to the basemap layer and display a layer template for the new layer you selected. Select the layer template of the new layer you f678ea9f9e
